She Learned All About the Twins and Aunt Jane's Little Love Affair and Sister Gertie's Narrow Escape and a Whole Lot More Besides.

Yes'm, that's my marriage certificate, and them pictures pasted on it is me and pa the day we was married. scared it made him look peaked. Do you like to look at photographs? Most everybody does, I guess. Wait till I get the album. Yes, it is kind of a pretty cover-real plush. I got it off a book peddler lady-dollar down and 50 cents a month.

Them's twins. There was two of them. They looked just like you see them there. One of them is my husband, but nobody can tell which he is now. Sort of creepy, ain't it, not to know whether your own husband is one twin or the other? One of them died when he was sixteen, and that broke the set. I think it is the sweet-Mr. and Mrs. John Van Pearse and est picture in the album, they look so tle calves. Gran'ma Jones used to make their clothes herself. You'd never guess it, would you? She used to lay the cloth in two thicknesses and cut out two suits at once. If one of them had been a girl she couldn't have done it. Turn over the page.

That's the gentleman Aunt Jane nearly married. He looks like a college professor, don't he? He was so refined and meek and so eloquent at prayer meeting. But he wasn't a professor; he peddled Grigg's infallible cure for hog cholera and lectured on temperance. He was awful poor in his health, and the minute Aunt Jane set eyes on him she made up her mind to marry him. She was forty, and she usually got what she wanted, and everybody said it was a thousand chances to one that she would get him. But just when Aunt Jane was sure she had him he got wind of it. He went back to Massachusetts the next day and died peaceful. Turn over the page. That's my sister Gertle and a base singer we used to have in the choir. His name was Spung - Launcelot Spung-and he was a barber by profession. Him and Gertle was engaged for six weeks, but she found out he had a wife and six children at Boston, so she didn't marry him. He was the sweetest singer! You'd never imagine he had a wife and six children if you could have heard him sing. Ain't it awful how sinful people can be and vet look so innocent? Gertie took on awful when she heard the facts about him, and she wouldn't get engaged to anybody else for a long time, and you know what that means for a choir singer. Turn over the page.

Sue Hartwick that is, one of my old girl chums. She ran off with a cattle buyer and got married, but that wasn't until five years after this picture was took. She had a lovely character-so light and playful and that fond of handsome clothes. I remember the day she had that picture took. She'd been to a picule with a traveltrim the very hat she has on. It was a green straw with roses, one red and one blue and one yellow. It matched her complexion lovely. was a dark blond with red hair. Oh. yes, she always smiled that way on account of one front tooth being out.

That's my Aunt Phoebe by marriage the day she was married. Ain't she sweet? The basket wasn't hers, It belonged to the man that took the picture. Neither was the curls all hers, though they didn't belong to the photograph man. I've got them now laid away till they come in handy. tell pa it's a pity it ain't man's bair 'stead of lady's, and then he could wear it. Baldness seems to run in his family. His father was so bald that he never used a brush and comb for forty-two years; used to comb his hair with a flannel rag. That dress of Aunt Phoebe's is the lowest necked anybody on either side of our family ever had, but then she was a great one for society. Turn over the page.-Ellis Parker Butler in Reader.

Queer Legal Oaths. In Siberia in the wild Ostavaka law courts, the natives swear by the newly severed head of a bear, which is implored to subsequently rend and deyour them should they perjure themselves, while in Assam the opposing witnesses lay hold of a chicken by its feet and retain each one-half as the clerk of the court chops it in two. By undergoing this ceremony they are onsidered to be pledged to a like fate in the event of their swearing falsely Chicago Journal.

BIRTH OF AN ICEBERG.

The Dramatic Experience of Two Antarctic Explorers.

C. E. Borchgrevink, commander of the antarctic expedition of 1898, nearly lost his life by an accident of a nature so peculiar that it is probable no other man could duplicate the experience. At the foot of Mount Terror in February, 1000, he landed from his ship with Captain Jensen and three other men. Then, wishing to take a picture of the shore, he sent his boat back to the vessel to get a camera, and he and Captain Jensen were left alone on the rough beach. Before the bont returned a strange and awful thing happened. Mr. Borchgrevink told the story in the Outlook: A roar and a rush, with tremendous explosions, shook the beach. The thought came to us that the perpendicular rocks above us were falling Then we realized what was taking place. The mighty glacier immediately to the west of us was giving birth to an leeberg. Millions of tons of fce planged into | the ocean. We could see nothing beyoud an immense cloud of rolling snow. The water rose from the plunge of this antarctic monarch. I sang out to Jensen, "Now we shall have to face the wave!"

We rushed to the highest point of our limited beach, four feet above the sea. We saw advancing on us a dark green ridge with a white crest. called to Jensen to struggle for dear We clutched the uneven rocks. with our backs toward the advancing water. Although it could not have taken more than seven minutes, the time seemed long before the water closed over our heads. Floating upward, scrambling upon the rocks, I tore the nails from my flesh in my endeavor to keep from be ing dragged out. After the second wave we again felt the rocks under our feet. At the place where Jensen and I first stood the rock was wet twenty feet above our heads. It was someing gentleman from Cincinnati and what lower when it struck us. Where got engaged to him, I helped her the wave had struck with full force the face of the rock had been altered. and rocks were still falling when the three men in the boat found us, bleed-

Two facts had saved us. To our right a small peninsula of ice protruded some five feet from the rock, and the rock itself bent toward the west. From the moment it struck the curve of the mountain rock to the west of us the wave took a course more easterly than where Jensen and I stood,
